JEWISH STUDIES MINOR

@ UC Santa Barbara

Since 1964, UC Santa Barbara has been proud to offer students courses related to Judaism. These include a myriad of inter-departmental courses, including Hebrew (both Modern and Biblical), Biblical Studies, Rabbinic Studies, Jewish Media, the Holocaust, Trauma and Memory Studies, and much more.

WHY JEWISH STUDIES?

Undergraduate students interested in the cultural, historical, and societal development of Judaism are encouraged to consider the Jewish Studies minor.

20
25

The Jewish Studies program is fortunate to have instructors from eight different departments throughout the Division of Humanities and Fine Arts at UCSB: the Department of Classics, the Department of English, the Department of Film and Media Studies, the Department of Germanic and Slavic Studies, the Department of History, the Department of History of Art and Architecture, the Department of Political Science, and the Department of Religious Studies.

EXPERIENCED LECTURERS

Our offerings in Judaica are strong not simply in number but by their contextualization, unique among the University of California campuses, within an energetic Religious Studies Department and the perspective that it brings.

INTERDISCIPLINARY

A further strength lies in our interdisciplinary configuration, especially in the modern period. Jewish political movements, the sociology of Jewish minor and majority communities, and the representation of Jewish experience in literature, philosophy, film, art, and architecture – all these facets combine to produce a dynamic yet grounded study of Jews throughout the world. Our program reflects the diversity that is inherent in the Jewish religion itself.
